

THE CARTOLOGIST

His name was John Hedley BSC, a second cousin of the Wylam man, responsible for inventing the First Railway. Originally from Langley Park, the son of a miner at Aykley Head Colliery. Scholastically he attended St Leonards, before taking a successful degree at Durham University.

His strengths were Geography and Art but he was also strong in technical drawing. This gave him the platform to be the fantastic map producer he turned out to be.

Whilst at Durham he became great friends with Johnnie Walker (Kilmarnock whisky distiller), Phileas Fogg (inventor & philanthropist) and Geordie Armstrong (The Edinburgh Barologist), they dubbed John the Cartologist for the outstanding graphics he became famous for.

John loved the Garden House and he had many "barmy" evenings with his above mentioned marras. He also created a lot of his ideas in this wonderful establishment. So much so, it is only poetic justice that we give him the ultimate accolade of "The Cartologist" at the Garden House.

John was a very calming influence on all those around him and when he was not mapping the world he always referred to the Garden House and as a result was always welcomed with open arms. Another of the main reasons for this was his motto "that he liked to be nice all of his life", hopefully, we can all live up to this when we re-walk his footsteps at the iconic venue this has become.
